One Pool, a Senator from North Carolina, made a ghastly little Morton-like aperch this afternoon. A slly fellow is Pool. There was evidently a blunder committed by the registrar of names when this man appeared in Nathanici Macon's and George E. Badger's place. There was a singular substitution of letters, and Pool means Yool. The heaviest loser, too, is the Fool. The heaviest loser, too, is that body of political blackiers who have won this execrable worthless "pool." Stirthia pool, and filth and stench and blood and hones and martyred myrtads rise to the surface to disgust mankind. The filthy, four morious gases that rose this afternoon in the Neuale Chamber from the senge of this pointied, "pool" gave the galleries black comit. This from the scum of this politiced "pool" gave the galleries black comit. This pool of North Carolina pollutes the very sir we breathe. Every sickething vapor exades from exary little thought that bubbles up from the well spring of his intellect too shallow to thoat a good idea and not deep enough to sink a and not deep enough to sink a mean one. This is the age of woman and electricity. They are one and the same thing—lightning.

Janauschek, the pelebrated German pragedieuns, arrived in Paris a short times tragedlar as the strongest fool that his inteflectual atomich can digest, and his dirty tracks in paths of partiasnahip show that he is a regular "tap heel." I am satisfied that Mr. Pool is an increase man. He looks so like a fool, and never, never in this missions that the strongest of his fellow-creatures. I know Pool. Pool's speech was a re-markable effusion. No may know when he closed; whether he was for or against the sall-down (Bingham's amondment, though a Jobby member told me privately that the Sonster was always for Pool.

ANOTHER OF THE SAME SORT. Revels is said to have written the speech which a man named Hamilton, from Texas, delivered to-day in the Senato.
